A Christian Nation?

Wikipedia says, “Christian nationalism ... focuses on promoting the Christian views of its followers in order to achieve prominence or dominance in political, cultural, and social life.” As a pastor, I do not object to promoting Christian views, but I strongly object to doing so with an aim to dominance. Jesus never sought dominance. He repeatedly slipped away when people sought to crown him king. He chastised his followers when they tried to fight for him. He neither claimed nor sought any form of earthly kingdom. He opened the borders of God’s heavenly kingdom to people of other nations and beliefs: Samaritans, Syrophoenicians, Ethiopians, Greeks, and Romans. He did not push his own beliefs, but rather invited others to “come and see.” When he was ridiculed, persecuted, arrested, and even killed, he did not seek retribution but remained silent, allowing his words and actions to be his only witness. And it was this witness that inspired the fledgling church such that the more persecution it endured, the faster it grew. It was only when Christianity was embraced by the Roman empire (for political rather than religious reasons) that the church began to embrace the tools of empire, using legislation and violence for its own ends, armies becoming tools of evangelism and the cross a symbol of domination.

Since the decline of the Roman empire and the imperialistic church it fostered, there have always been those who sought to resurrect a nationalistic church as a political tool of domination, the most infamous being the alliance of the German Lutheran church to the Nazi state in the 1930s and 40s. This shameful history has made today’s Lutheran church all the more vigilant against any such repeat of Christian nationalism.

Today ultra-conservative evangelicals, Christian Zionists, white supremacists, and ultra-nationalists are once again seeking to enshrine Christianity in a privileged position and use it as a tool of domination over others with views differing from their own. In response, Elizabeth Eaton, Bishop of the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America wrote, "Christian Nationalism is a perversion of the gospel and a threat to democracy. It's precisely because I love my country that I warn against it."

I am proud to be an American, but like Jesus before me, I continue to believe that God's kingdom is not of this world. When God's Kingdom is finally realized, at a time Jesus insisted we can never know, all nations, our own included, will dissolve into the one diverse, unbounded, all-inclusive unity of God's love. Until that time, in the name of the one who adopted the title of servant rather than king, we must never again allow any would-be kings to distort Christianity into a political tool of domination.

God bless you all, Pastor Martin
